Clarification

Sometimes your group members don't know that they can create their own posts, and that they're welcome to create their own posts, and ask you questions. So sometimes you need to straight up say that; in a Facebook live or in a post, that simply says, "Hey, if you ever have a question for me, just create a post and I will come in and answer it for you." So doing that will help them feel more comfortable and break that ice when people do have questions and are too afraid to step over any boundaries. They just may not know any better. So go ahead and create that post and let them know, "Hey, you're welcome to ask me any question. Just go ahead and post it in the group."
